A SILENT FIGURE FLASHES ACROSS THE SKY.

THE PEOPLE ARE FLEEING AND DESERTING THE CITY- SOMETHING DREADFUL MUST HAVE HAPPENED, I MUST FIND OUT!

WHILE OTHERS FLEE, THE SPREAD OF DESTRUCTION CONTINUES.

I CAN'T SEE! I CAN'T SEE!

GET OUT OF HERE-- MEN!

DAN HASTINGS

THE RETURN OF DR. STRANGE.

As Dan and Gloria raced out of the room, they did not hear the agonized screams from Dr. Strange. "I've got to get that bottle," he screeched, as he raised his tortured body to grab the bottle of serum in the cabinet.

The mad scientist's body was quickly wasting away from the acid that spilled on him when Dan Hastings crashed a laboratory instrument against it.

Strange grabbed the bottle, the bottle that turned small bugs into giant creatures. He ripped the cover off and swallowed the potion.

A roaring crash filled the room! As the mist slowly cleared, there, in the center of the room, stood Dr. Strange. His arms had turned to wings, and his teeth protrude like giant tusks. He flapped his right arm. He looked down at it and let out a roaring screech.

Strange looked down and he saw a feathered skeleton for an arm. He flapped it and a sweeping momentum raised him slowly into the air.

"Dan Hastings!" he roared. As the name of his hated enemy resounded through the room, the man's mind began to whirl. He realized he spoke and thought like a human. Before, he had the mind of a devil, but now, he was a devilish creature, both in mind and body.

The remainder of his body was gaunt, but strong. Only his right arm was without skin and muscle tissues, but well covered with feathers.

"Hastings," he screamed, "I'll seal your doom as you have sealed my body in this ghastly form."

Meanwhile, in the elaborate halls of the Academy of Science, Dan Hastings watched Dr. Carter as he addressed the assembly of prominent scientists. "Gentlemen," Carter said, "with the incriminating evidence handed to us by Dan Hastings, regarding Dr. Strange, we of the Academy resolve to forever strike his name from the records of science."

"Even Dr. Strange's acid gun, now displayed before us," he continued, "shall be changed in name. This mighty weapon that has strengthened our armed forces shall be called the X gun, instead of Dr. Strange's anti-metal gun. All in favor say 'aye'."

Suddenly, across the room belled a ghastly voice, "The first to say 'aye' dies!"

The terrified scientists looked up towards the empty balcony from where the voice came and saw a giant bug beast with human resemblances.

Dan Hastings quickly steadied his nerves and a challenging yell came from him. "What savage or beast are you?"

"I'm Dr. Strange," roared the beast, "and now you shall all be witnesses to each other's death. I've barred the doors. None can escape."

The terrified scientists slowly retreated. Incoherent mumblings came from their lips, "Incredible!"

"Incredible!" roared the beast. "Now you will see Dr. Carter die." With a savage leap, the beast man dove from the balcony towards Dr. Carter.

Dan Hastings charged from his place to battle the beast. Dan lashed out blow after blow. Strange staggered back and then brought his mighty wing down on Dan's head.

A vitriolic cry came from the mouth of the beast, "Hastings, I planned to kill you last, but now I must finish you first."

He charged forward, his deadly tusklike teeth were almost upon the dazed Hastings, when Dan Whirled and slid away. Swiftly the beast rolled over and seized him with its feathered arms. Dan braced his knees in the pit of the creature's stomach and kicked hard, sending it flying into the air.

Dazed and groggy, Dan rose to his feet, as the beast prepared for a final lunge. Hastings reached out, grabbed the acid gun, and fired directly at the beast's head.

An agonizing wail filled the room and the beast fell dead on the platform.

Dr. Carter rushed to Dan's side. "Are you all right?" he asked nervously.

"Yes," answered Dan, as a cynical grin curled up in the corner of his mouth, "but it took the devil's own weapon to destroy him forever."

MIDNIGHT PRESENT

Major Victory, the mighty guardian of America, on a visit to London, walked slowly down a side street during the blackout. There were no lights as the all clear signal had not been sounded.

He paused to cross the street. A faint cry reached his ears, "Major Victory, Major Victory!" a woman's voice called. He stopped in amazement. Who, in such darkness, could have recognized him?

The woman came closer. She held a bundle in her arms. "I recognized you half an hour ago from the flare of a bomb," she spoke, "I've been following you ever since."

"What is it lady?" the American asked, "Are you in trouble?"

"I know of your daring exploits in America, Major Victory," she said quietly. Then thrusting the bundle in his arms, she continued, "Take this to my sister in Dover, 47 Narrow Lane." With that she disappeared.

Major Victory stepped forward and called into the darkness. "Miss! Miss!" he repeated. Only the echo of far away footsteps answered him.

Holding the bundle carefully, he hurried to his hotel. It was soft, squashy and moved several times. Not until he was in his own room did Victory discover that the strange package contained a tiny baby.

. . . The next morning, Major Victory carried the little burden up the stairs, of the house in Dover.

He knocked on the door and a man answered. Victory held out the child and said, "During last night's blackout in London, a woman asked me to deliver this child to her sister, here."

The old man nodded. "Thank you, thank you," he mumbled, as he took the tiny bundle and turned away from the door.

Major Victory pushed his foot forward and held the door open. Then, with a heave, he pushed his way inside.

"Get out! get out!" the old man cried. "I will take care of the child now!"

"I think I'll help you!" shot Major Victory, as he leaped forward grabbing the gun out of the man's hands.

From behind a curtain in the living room, several men suddenly dived on Victory. Stunned for an instant he fell and the men piled on top of him. Cold steel touched his neck. "Move and I'll splatter your brains all over the place!" a sinister voice whispered into his ear.

With a lunge, the mighty Major Victory leaped to his feet. The gun at his neck exploded harmlessly into the ceiling. Using both fists, Victory landed blow after blow on the men crowding forward.

Like a powerful battering ram, the mighty American's fists smashed at the faces that loomed before him.

It was several minutes later before the husky Major Victory stood over the beaten group of men. He wiped a streak of blood where a knife point had touched him. Three men came through the door. "Ahhh! Inspector Manners," the American said politely.

"Yes and I see you've done as good a job rounding up spies in London as you've been doing back in the U. S. A.," the Scotland Yard man said smilingly, as he surveyed the group on the floor.

"Not yet, Inspector," Victory shouted, as he rushed to the window. Then, yanking the drape from the bar, revealed the figure of a woman. "The last and probably the most shrewd of all," he shouted.

Inspector Manners covered her with a gun while another Scotland Yard man slipped a pair of handcuffs on her wrists.

"You were very clever," the voice of the night before said softly, "but, how did you figure it out?"

"When a baby cries one should change its clothing," Victory responded calmly. "In doing so, I found the map of the munitions factory drawn on its underthings. The rest was simple. A matter of cooperation between Scotland Yard and myself."

As the last of the prisoners was ushered out the door, Inspector Manners turned to the American and said, "Never knew a name to fit a man better—Major Victory—over the enemies of liberty!"
